Yesterday, we reported on the bizarre case of a lawyer who appears to have sexually harassed women on the Internet, apparently as part of a rape fantasy, according to a letter from a California prosecutor. A post by this woman on an Internet blog details her experiences with this lawyer, who was admitted to the California bar in 1996, and who also holds his own blog. The blogger is Kristen McKittrick, a paralegal at a large law firm in Southern California. She alleges that this lawyer, who goes by the name of "Mark Jordan," started communicating with her on a number of websites in 2004, including Legal-2.com and Legal-2.com2. The gist of their conversations, McKittrick wrote, was that she was attracted to him and he was attracted to her, and she should send him nude pictures. McKittrick said that it wasn't just a one-off incident. She received letters from him through the years, including one that he sent her by fax a few days before her father's death. In an email, McKittrick alleged that Jordan told her that he had raped a woman and was looking to recreate the experience on her. She apparently sent him nude pictures of herself, and he told her that he would not let her down, if she agreed to a threesome with his law partner, who apparently had experienced the rape as well. She refused, and he wrote her off as a liar. McKittrick reported that Jordan eventually approached her at a legal conference in Orange County and asked her for a job. She worked for him as an intern for several months, before he let her go. He then sent her a letter that she printed out and gave to a police detective when he reported the matter. The letter provides the most graphic detail yet of the lawyer's offenses. It describes Jordan's behavior in great detail, including e-mails that he sent her that allegedly described how he had sex with his law partner. The letter ends with a

A quite loaded interface will greet you upon startup, but you'll get used to it after a while. A lot of musical terms are used, such as vibrato, harmony, tremolo, amplitude, and so on, and if you don't much know what they do, the best way to find out is by playing around with them. While the Sampler and Sequencer have not yet been released, the Synth tab is where you'll spend your time. To create a sound effect, press on the desired piano key, then play around with the mixing. Depending on how you tweak the settings, the sound signature can drastically change, but that's not all. Generate and randomize The Generator function can help a lot when looking for a specific sound effect: coin, zap, boom, jump, among others, have presets to get users started. These presets can be tweaked to your liking, and with the synthesizing options available, the tweaking can only go as far as your creativity. Alternatively, the Randomizer function can come up with some interesting sounds, so definitely try that when you're of ideas. In conclusion ChipTone can help you create some sound effects you can call yours — it's also great fun to use, so that's all the better.
