over Barack Obama in 2012. “Had I known what I now know, I would have voted differently,” he said in a Monday interview on ABC News’ “This Week.” “I had a great candidate named Mitt Romney, and he’s a great candidate,” he said, in reference to his failed presidential campaign against Obama. Romney went on to say that he still wishes he’d voted for Santorum. “If I could go back I would have voted for Santorum,” he said. Santorum has repeatedly accused Romney of casting a ballot for Obama, and even in the weeks leading up to the election, the former Pennsylvania senator suggested it was his duty to hold Romney to his pledge to vote for his opponent.

Life Parris was educated at King's College, Cambridge, but at an early age went into the church. His early works were several churches in the vicinity of London. He began building his own house, and was also engaged to build the fortifications of New York on the foundations of an old Dutch tower. Works He built the Naval Dockyard at Deptford (c. 1670), the first of the Royal Dockyards constructed in England, after the destruction of the Medina Works. Parris also designed the Doggett's Coat Fountain, London (1674–75), based on the well-known Font de Dol in Rouen. References Category:Year of
