AutoUpdater.NET on Codeplex. The features include automatic updating, release notes and setup. A: AutoUpdater.NET is open source and works great A: Try this one. i have used it and it works fine. I have used it in an image processing application. I didn't use it extensively but it did the work. Q: How to perform image convolution for a gray-scale image? As we know, the convolution operation can be performed for an RGB color image. But what should I do if I have a gray-scale image? Should I just apply three different filters to each row of the image? Or is there a smarter way? A: First, you should know that it is impossible to perform Convolution for an image with one gray scale value. After that, if you use convolution with one filter, the result will be a gray scale image. Look at the following example:  $I_1$  is an image of size  $W \times H$  with gray scale value  $\alpha$  in each pixel:  $I_1 \xrightarrow{\alpha \in [0; 255]} I_1 \xrightarrow{\alpha \in [0; 255]} I_1 \xrightarrow{\alpha \in [0; 255]} I_2 \xrightarrow{\alpha \in [0; 255]} I_3 \xrightarrow{\alpha \in [0; 255]} I_4$  The convolution operation, applied to one of the filters, gives a gray scale image.  $\begin{matrix} I_1 & & & \\ & I_2 & & \\ & & I_3 & \\ & & & I_4 \end{matrix}$
